About the Work

I'm Building Me A Home is not a well known spiritual. In fact, when searching through the many collections of spirituals, such as American Negro Songs by John W. Work and Negro Slave Songs in the United States by Miles Mark Fisher, very few references can be found. There is a published arrangement by Uzee Brown Jr., which was recorded and performed by the Morehouse Glee Club. It is a call and response spiritual where the rhythms might have been used to coordinate a task like working in the fields. Here, the text draws on a theme of resilience toward freedom, toward home, in the face of slavery and its brutal working conditions.

This new setting of I'm Building Me A Home is scored for SATB chorus. The goal was to produce something raw, and not to overly arrange or modernize it with contemporary choral language. Set in C# minor, the tessitura for the singers is low, requiring access to the chest register (although transposing up a half step is acceptable). The atmosphere should be heavy, yet simple.

As with many spirituals, it is nearly impossible to capture all of the performance practice and improvisation style onto paper. The notation represents only part of the performance practice. Singers should bend notes, add inflections, delay or anticipate the beat, and improvise wails and moans within the texture. For example, the eighth-notes in this particular arrangement could be swung (preferred) or performed straight, but always on the back of the beat. The improvised wails and moans should build with the music to climax before the final unison cadence. It is encouraged to take the time explore the music and create your own culturally appropriate interpretation.

I'm Building Me a Home

I'm building me a home.
This earthly house is gonna soon decay,
an' my soul gotta have somewhere to stay.

When you hear me moanin', I'm building me a home.
When you hear me prayin', I'm building me a home.
When you hear me shoutin', I'm building me a home.
